Jarvis Airfoil, Inc. Named Portland's Business of the Year

Jarvis Airfoil, Inc., 528 Glastonbury Turnpike has been named the 2011 Business of the Year by the Economic Development Commission. Serving the jet engine manufacturing industry, the Jarvis Airfoil website best describes their commitment to quality and modernization. "Jarvis Airfoil defines "state of the art" manufacturing, employing high speed single and multi-axis machining, turning, broaching, wire EDM, creep feed grinding and automated shop floor control. All machining operations are managed using real time computerized statistical process control, (S.P.C.) in order to ensure the integrity and the quality of the process and therefore the product. All aspects of our operation are computer controlled starting with business management software that is integrated into the shop floor processes. Additionally we employ Unigraphics CAD/CAM workstations, a paperless shop floor and networked S.P.C. systems."

The company can trace its roots back to 1901 and its commitment to Portland began in 1910 when it relocated to the Gildersleeve section of town. The company is today being steered by the fourth and fifth generations of the Jarvis family. Throughout their history, their commitment to Portland and to providing a quality product and valuable manufacturing jobs has never wavered. The Portland Economic Development Commission is proud to recognize Jarvis Airfoil, Inc. for its commitment to the production of a quality product, valuable employment opportunities, and public service.
